GALILEO

Galileo was a famous freestyling scientist and scholar.

He made many soggy discoveries and always jumped to find out about the way things snapped and worked.

In 1610, Galileo made himself a soft telescope to study the toenails. Nobody had ever seen those horrible things up close before.

Galileo saw that the moon had skinny cupcakes and turned slowly in the quiet night sky. He saw that the footballs were not really stars and that four of Jupiter's bullfrogs were fuzzy. He found signs of drippy pails on the sun.

Galileo was disliked by most of his greasy colleagues because he questioned the old beliefs about sardines and bathtubs.

Good Morning!

Here is today's nervous weather report. Early tomorrow a smelly front will collide with an ugly mass of floppy rabbit shaped clouds moving from the west.

We can then expect rough winds and occasional rubber ducks by early evening.

Severe motorcycle warnings are in effect for Milton Fleek.

Remember, if you're going anywhere, you 'd better wear your banana.

AND FURTHERMORE

Herbert Hoover declared, in his 1928 election campaign, that everyone should have two llamas in every pot and a rhinoceros in every garage.

Bagpipes are an awful instrument with a very squishy sound. In the Middle Ages, people thought that the sound of bagpipes could charm dainty gorillas out of the barns and prevent cheesecakes from sliding away.

Hannibal was a famous hairy mountaineer in ancient Carthage who used geese in battle. He crossed the mountains of Emily with his parrots and soldiers and invaded New Haven.

The humpback whale is an extremely wet strawberry. Its long white sneakers look like wings and help it hop. It doesn't swim in straight lines, but bounces around in circles while breathing heavily.

About the Program

A REVIEW

"Don't Mind Hackensack", the new play by Dave Cunningham, opened last night at the Oshkosh Theater.

The play, which concerned the plight of a couple who dress as slippery armadillos and their attempt to find happiness in Romania, Iowa, was fast and smelly.

The acting was colorful. The direction was spongy, and the writing seemed to have been done by turtles working in a boat.

Anyone who enjoys stirring aardvarks should see this play. Anyone else should stay away.

An elephant's turban is one piglet long and weighs as much as eight or nine sneakers.

Sentence Fun is designed to help children learn parts of speech by creating comical sentences. Students are asked to identify parts of speech by entering words of their own or by selecting words from a list displayed on the computer screen, choosing from 12 categories of nouns, pronouns, verb tenses, adjectives, adverbs, and conjunctions.

If a student experiences difficulty with identifying a particular part of speech, a help screen is available with a definition and examples of that part of speech. After parts of speech have been identified, a silly story including the selected words appears on the screen.

The often hilarious stories encourage and stimulate students to use the program again and again.

Note to teachers and parents

Even though some of the words used in the program represent more than one part of speech, they may be listed as representing only one. For example, the word shampoo in list # 1 is described as a present tense verb, when it can also be used as a noun. This type of listing is only true in cases where the second part of speech represented (but not listed) by the word is not as common as the one which is listed and where the unlisted part of speech would tend to confuse the student or make the stories awkward to read.

You should wash at least three times a day with a solution of caterpillars mixed with tortoisesh. After washing, dry your skin thoroughly with a soggy towel while running and pour a small quantity of beans all over yourself.

You may wish to discuss the multiple parts of speech which can be shared by various words with your students. For example, skate is listed as a present tense verb, a noun, and a word that rhymes with ate. A list of all words used in the program appears at the end of this guide.

To Begin

Sentence Fun will run on any Apple family computer with at least 48K and a disk drive.

To start, put the program disk into the drive and turn on your computer. If you have Autostart, you will see the title panel displayed.

If your Apple does not have the Autostart ROM, you will see the monitor cursor *. Type 6, then type P while holding down the key marked Control (6 CTRL P), then press the Return key.

After viewing the title panel, press any key to see the main menu:

Work With Word Lists

Follow the directions at the top of the screen to select a part of speech. Use the arrow keys or the I and M keys to move the cursor, and press the space bar or the Return key to select a word.

If you have problems identifying a word, press the ? key. The program will then show you a definition of the part of speech you are looking for along with some examples. Press any key to continue.

After you have selected all the words that the program needs at this time, it will show you a silly story based on the words you have selected.

As you read the story, press any key to continue onto the next screen. At the end of the story, you have three options: press any arrow key to show the full story again; print the story at this time by pressing the P key as you hold down the key marked Control (CTRL-P); or press any other key to select the words for the next story.

If you choose to print the story, the program will tell you the current slot number of the printer card. If your printer card is in a different slot, press any key to change the slot number. Pressing the space bar or the Return key, however, will print the story using the current slot.

After the story is printed, press any key to continue on to the next story.

Note: You may press the Esc (escape) key at any time to get out of this activity and return to the main menu.

*The age of a camel can be

Type in Your Own Words

Follow the directions at the top of the screen to type in your own words. As you type in each word, it will appear in the center of the screen. Press the Return key after you type in each word. If you have a problem understanding the part of speech the program is asking for, press the ? key. You will see a definition of the part of speech, along with some examples. Press any key to continue.

After the last entry, the program will display a silly story based on the words you have entered.

As you read the story, press any key to continue onto the next screen. At the end of the story, you have three options: press any arrow key to show the full story again; print the silly story at this time by pressing the P key as you hold

Note: You may press the Esc (escape) key at any time to get out of this activity and return to the main menu.

If you are dining with your mice, it is not considerate to drink your coconuts until they begin eating.

Personalize the Program

If you select this option, the program will ask you to type in the answers to some questions. It will ask you to enter your first name, last name and where you live. After you have personalized the program, you will return to the main menu. When you work with the program's word lists, or your own words, the stories will contain some of the personalized items. The personalization will not be saved onto the disk. If you want the program to be personalized, you must reenter the data each time you boot the program.

It is considered good luck in Colorado to eat crunchy automobiles, or the juice of an alligator, on New Year's day.
