In The Ashland Revolution, you are Rip Deappe, a somewhat less than satisfied student at Ashland High. You have realized that some of the teachers there are a bit, shall we say, out of the ordinary. For instance, your biology teacher, whom you have thought is a drug dealer ever since you saw him in an alley downtown acting suspicious once.

Well, one day you decided to do something about all this, so you called the Superintendent of Schools' office, somehow got to talk to him directly, and complained. Not wishing to destroy his image or embarrass himself in any way, he told YOU to do it. Of course, he wouldn't have ever believed you, except that he'd heard some nasty rumors about Ashland High's faculty...

He told you that "all you had to do" was to get substantial evidence that at least three faculty members were guilty, and he would order an investigation of the entire school's staff.

Having no idea where to start, you just got up one weekend and decided to start on your important task...

Instructions

There can't really be too many instructions to a game that tries to simulate real life, but there are a few things you should know before you start playing The Ashland Revolution.

The most important thing to know is that you must return to your bedroom when you think you have finished the game. If you have indeed "won," you will receive the winning message.

Also, you should know that the commands "rest" and "wait" are interchangeable (and important in some scenes).

Other than that, just look make sure to check the command menu a lot, since it sometimes has a clue when you're in a jam.

About Aftermath Software

Aftermath Software, not exactly a major corporation (or even a small business), exists simply for the entertainment of all Macintosh users. Certainly you could go out and buy an incredible game for $39.97, which is the best solution in many cases, but I believe that programs shouldn't cost so much. So, by not spending lots of money on pretty boxes and "beautifully illustrated" manuals, I have created software that, while not quite as good as most of the big time stuff, is just as entertaining and a lot less expensive.

If you ever need help on a game or have any comments, suggestions, or requests, please send them to the address above or call (615)356-8708 after business hours (ask for Andrew), and I will do my best to respond to them and/or use them to help me make future software better.

Good luck!
