WELCOME TO

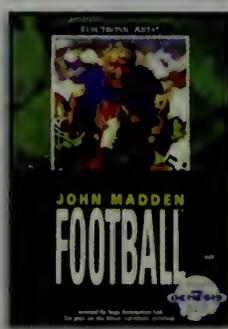

MADDEN NFL™ 2000

Boom! Welcome to EA SPORTS' Madden NFL 2000. Packed with all the bone-crushing, smashmouth football you've come to expect from the leader in sports simulation, Madden™ NFL 2000 even offers some new surprises. Whether you want to lock horns on the frozen tundra of Lambeau Field or give Mile-High Salutes to the Denver crowd, "if it's in the game, it's in the game."™

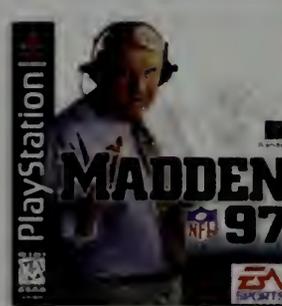

THE BIRTH OF MADDEN FOOTBALL

1998 Award Winning PC Game

Back in 1986, the CEO of Electronic Arts met with John Madden as he was traveling on a train en route to broadcast an NFL game. Of course, Madden doesn't fly and the Madden Cruiser had yet to be born. So, on the train the CEO and various EA programmers spoke to Madden about collaborating on the first PC football game. John was very interested and liked the ideas he was hearing, but when EA suggested that the game feature two teams of seven players, Madden wouldn't hear of it. "If it's not 11 on 11, it's not real football," John said. "I will not put my name on it if it's not real."

At that historic moment the direction for the Madden franchise was set. Even though it sent EA back to the drawing board for another two years before they could perfect a game with 22 players, that's what EA did. Each and every year, that Madden mandate has motivated the EA team to produce the most realistic and authentic football game possible.

Madden is known as the best there is at communicating what is happening on a football field. During his broadcasts each Sunday during the NFL season he becomes a teacher. As a Super Bowl™-winning coach he knows the X's and O's, but what sets him apart is he can communicate advanced football theory in easy-to-understand language. EA wanted to tap into that knowledge to make the video game extremely deep in gameplay and artificial intelligence, yet easy and fun to play.

HISTORY OF MADDEN FOOTBALL

The first Madden football game ever made was named John Madden Football and it ran on the Apple II computer. The game shipped in 1989 and was an instant success. Since that time EA has made the game available on numerous other gaming platforms, including an assortment of Apple® computers and PCs, the Commodore® 64, Sega® Genesis®, Super Nintendo Entertainment Systems®, Amiga®, 3DO® Multiplayer, PlayStation®, Sega® Saturn®, and Nintendo® 64.

MADDEN FOOTBALL: THE CHOICE OF PLAYERS

EA SPORTS' football leadership is acknowledged by All-Pro running back Dorsey Levens of the Green Bay Packers who said, "Last year I provided a lot of input to the Madden production team from the player's perspective. My tips concentrated on the running game, but other guys in the league also gave EA SPORTS a lot of input about their specific positions and what they thought could be improved. Madden is the game we all play on the road and in the locker room, so we were thrilled when EA SPORTS asked us to help them with the game. The results were awesome. Madden is the best-playing game out there. Check it out."

1999—An early look at Madden 2000

EA SPORTS' John Madden Football series has sold more than 13 million units over the lifetime of the franchise.

Success brings increased competition though, and the market has become crowded. Even in a highly competitive field, Madden reigned supreme last year. According to the TRSTS Video Game Report published by the NPD group, Madden NFL 99 was the number-one selling PlayStation sports video game in 1998 in North America, with 1,128,366 units sold that year—over 164,000 more than its closest competitor in the sports category.

Madden NFL 99 and other earlier versions of Madden for the PC also dominated the PC football category in 1998. According to the market research firm PC Data, the Madden franchise of PC football games accounted for 57 percent of the PC football market in 1998. The next closest competitor registered only 7.3 percent of unit sales.

MADDEN BOWL™

For the past five years at the Super Bowl the John Madden video game tournament, or "Madden Bowl," has been held to crown a champion among the players. The tournament helps determine who has ultimate bragging rights in the NFL.

"There are a lot of guys in the league who are die-hard video game players," said 1999 Madden Bowl winner, Ray Mickens of the New York Jets. "We all play in the locker room during training camp and in hotel rooms when we travel during the season, and the competition is intense. It's all practice for the Madden Bowl though, because that is the one tournament where you have to put up or shut up."

THE FUTURE OF MADDEN FOOTBALL

"The most important thing to me is that we need to keep pushing the limits of what is possible in a video game," says Madden. "The minute we stop innovating and working hard we'll stop being the leader. That's the way it is in the NFL and that's the way it is in video games. First of all we have to always stay current with the game so that it reflects what is actually happening in the NFL. When some teams were using the run-and-shoot we made sure we had it in the game, but as soon as it fell out of favor we yanked it quick. As playbooks change, new stadiums get built, teams move, and player personnel change, we have to have that in the game. We always have been the best in terms of providing that level of detail and it's important to me that we continue in that direction."

"From a technology standpoint the future looks incredible for the game," said Executive in Charge of Production, John Schappert. "As we enter the next generation of console video game systems with 128 bits of processing power, and as PC CPUs keep getting more and more advanced, the possibilities are endless in terms of what we can do from a graphical and gameplay standpoint. We've been using motion-capture technology for a number of years and that has really improved the look of the game. This year we captured the moves of Jamal Anderson from the Falcons, and Terrell Owens from the 49ers. We'll continue to bring more advanced physics into the game. Each year the game has reached new levels of realism, and new technology will allow us to continue to blur the gap between the game and reality. We look forward to utilizing all the technological advancements the new systems have to offer to create the best football game on the market, just as we have for the past decade."

GAMEPLAY BASICS

PLAYER CONTROLS

Much like previous Madden NFL incarnations, Madden NFL 2000 gives you a great deal of control over players' actions.

GENERAL OFFENSIVE CONTROLS

Call an audible if your opponent has set up a defensive formation likely to stuff your play, or if you want to take advantage of a weakness in the defensive formation.

When you've called a play with a player in motion, you can direct his movements.

If your hometown crowd is getting too rowdy, you can attempt to chill 'em out.

You can lateral the ball, but it's really not a very good idea.

RUSHING

Speed burst to put some distance between you and chasing defenders.

You can straight-arm any defenders trying to tackle you.

Hurdle over diving defenders or a fallen defender who can't get up.

Spin to evade defenders in the open field.

MISSING

Check off receivers to your right and left to see who's tired and to see if anyone is left uncovered. This also allows you to see which receivers and running backs are on the field.

When your QB leaves the pocket and is about to get creamed, slide to protect him from injury.

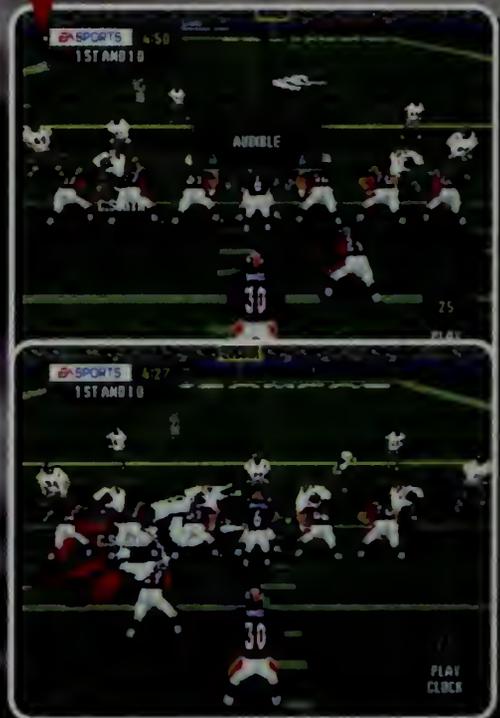

If no one is open and a sack is inevitable, throw the ball away (but only if you're outside the tackles).

Throw defenders off by pump-faking to a receiver.

DEFENSIVE CONTROLS

Call an audible if your opponent has set up an offensive formation you can exploit or to avoid your opponent taking advantage of a weakness in your defensive formation.

Shift the defensive linemen to plug any holes in your defense.

Shift the secondary for bump-and-run coverage.

Use the swim move to bust through the offensive line and put pressure on the QB.

Put the smack down hard enough and you'll knock your opponent's helmet right off.

Dive (rather than trying to power tackle) to crush your opponent.

Jump to tip or intercept the ball.

GOOD STUFF TO KNOW

OFFENSE

FORMATIONS

Madden NFL 2000 lets you choose from among nine major formations, plus a tenth Special Teams formation that lets you pick various punting, kicking, and clock management plays. Most formations have different variations, such as adding another receiver or bringing in a second tight end to load up the line.

Different formations lend themselves to various types of plays. For example, most plays that call for rushes up the middle of the field or off the tackle are run out of one of the I or Far/Near formations. Singleback, Pro Form, and Shotgun formations have more complicated, deeper routes.

GENERAL TIPS

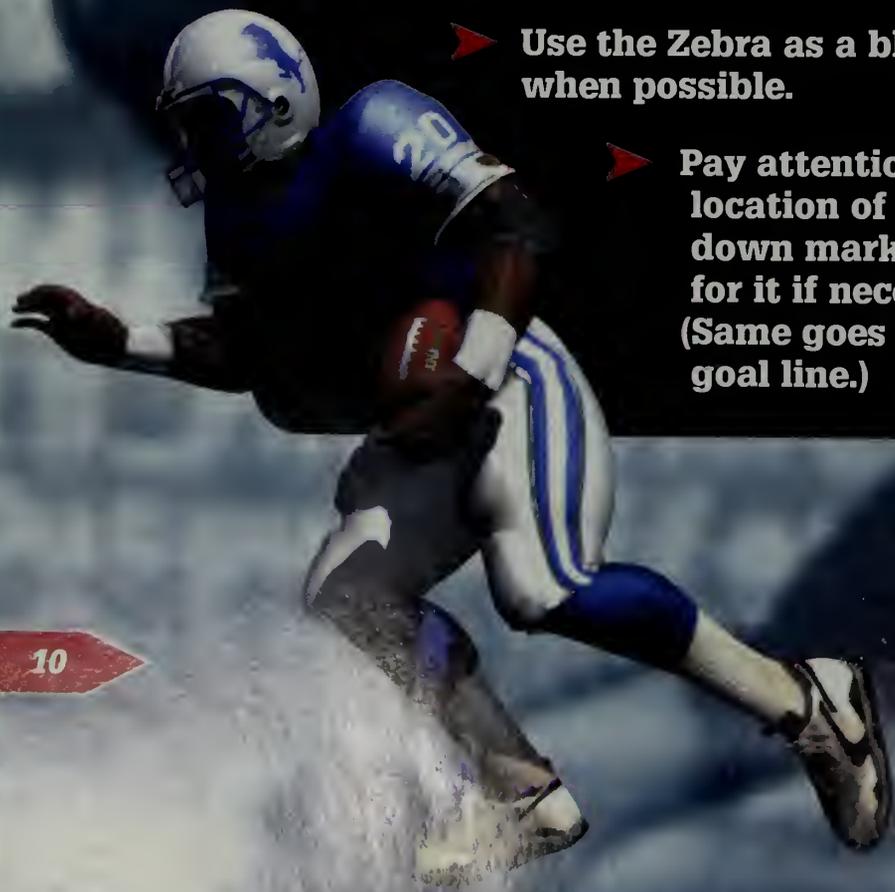

First, study your team's strengths and stick to using plays that take advantage of them. Madden NFL 2000 replicates many real-life characteristics of NFL teams. So, when playing as the 49ers or Chiefs, stick to the West Coast-style short pass offense. If you're playing as the Falcons or Steelers, you can go for up-the-gut, smash-mouth Madden-style football. Other general tips:

- ▶ Call different plays to spread the ball around the field.
- ▶ Try to get first downs rather than going for the big gain on every play.
- ▶ Run plays that utilize the wide side of the field. Do this by flipping your plays.
- ▶ Fake snaps may draw the defense offside, but they also might cause a false start by one of your offensive linemen.
- ▶ Direct players in motion to set up extra blocking.
- ▶ Take advantage of an unprepared defense. If they still have personnel running onto the field, hike the ball.
- ▶ Study your opponent's defensive formations. Call plays that best exploit their defensive tendencies. For example, if they like to blitz, throw screen passes to exploit their aggressiveness.
- ▶ Know when to hold 'em; know when to walk away; know when to punt.
- ▶ Trick plays, such as the Reverse and HB Toss & Pass, should be used sparingly, if at all. They are rarely effective.

TIPS WHEN RUNNING

- ▶ Find the hole, then follow your blocks.
- ▶ If the hole isn't where it's supposed to be, find another one or bounce to the outside.
- ▶ Avoid running toward the sideline as much as possible; keep going up the field.
- ▶ Hurdle, spin, juke, and straight-arm your way through defenders.
- ▶ Don't speed burst until you're pointed in the direction you want to go. You can't control the direction of your player with speed burst activated.
- ▶ Tackles can be broken if you keep speed burst activated.
- ▶ Don't outrun your blockers. Keep as many of them in front of you as possible at all times (or at least until you break into the open).
- ▶ Use the Zebra as a blocker when possible.
- ▶ Pay attention to the location of the first down marker. Dive for it if necessary. (Same goes for the goal line.)

RUSHING STRATEGIES

Your rushing game is the foundation for a dominant offense. If you can run the ball successfully, you'll have a better chance of winning games. Call a running play on most of your first downs to set up both pass and short yardage plays.

For short yardage blasts through the middle of the line, it's better to call plays that don't involve your halfback (unless your halfback is Jamal Anderson or Jerome Bettis). Instead, use your fullback for these plays. Fullbacks are also useful if you use your halfback extensively and he needs a breather. If your halfback gets too tired, he'll be prone to fumble and his overall skills will diminish. The game's default setting will automatically substitute overfatigued players.

Calling plays for your fullback occasionally can catch the defense off guard if they are keying on your halfback. Calling draw plays in long third-down situations can also catch the defense in a loose, pass-defensive formation.

Good scouting is beneficial. Check out your team's player stats to see which side of the offensive line is strongest, then run more to your strongest side. Check out the opposing team and note where the weaker players line up. Avoid running straight at the superstar defensive linemen.

The key is to mix up your play calling with sweeps, dives, sprints, and so on to keep the defense off-balance and to make the most of your particular running back's strengths.

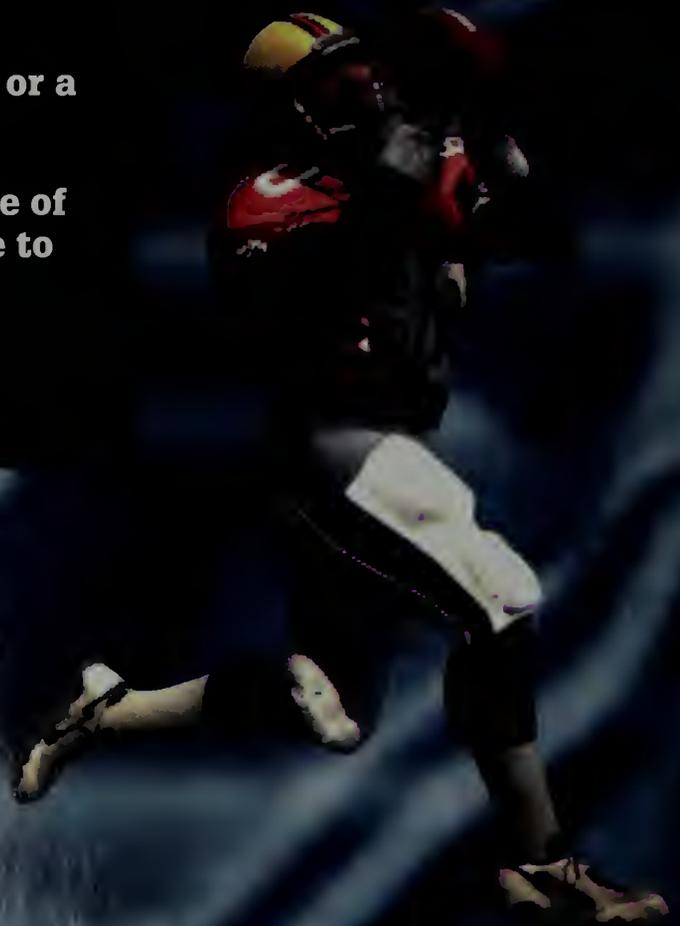

TIPS WHEN THROWING/RECEIVING

- For tips on running after you've caught the ball, refer to the previous "Tips When Running" section.
- Hit the receivers right as they make breaks along their routes.
- Look for outlet receivers running free in the flats if no one else is open.
- Don't drop back too far (never more than 10 yards). You increase the risk of a holding penalty or a big loss if sacked.
- If you roll out, avoid throwing back across the field. If you do, more often than not you'll be picked off.
- Try to let your QB set his feet before throwing the ball. Throwing off the back foot reduces your chances of completing the pass.

MORE TIPS WHEN THROWING/RECEIVING

- Scramble if no receivers are open. Once they've completed their routes, they'll come back toward the line of scrimmage.
- If your receivers are getting jammed at the line, wait as long as possible for them to get open. If no one is open, take off if you have room, or throw the ball away.
- Make sure you're outside the tackles if you need to throw the ball away. Otherwise, you'll get called for intentional grounding.
- For play action, don't touch the controller after you hike the ball. The QB will fake the handoff, then you can activate the pass routes and throw the pass.
- Avoid throwing into double or triple coverage. The more defenders around the ball, the more likely it will get knocked away or intercepted.
- Turn a receiver's route into a streak or a slant if the defense crowds the line.
- Put a man in motion to load one side of the line. Do this to force the defense to react and take advantage of the resulting man-to-man coverage.

PASSING STRATEGIES

Having a good passing game opens up more options for your offense. You can use screen passes and short yardage tosses mixed with crossing and deep routes to work the ball all over the field. If you combine this with a strong running attack, play action can burn defenses for long yardage.

There are five broad categories of passing plays. Following are explanations of when to utilize each type of pass play.

SHORT YARDAGE/SCREENS

Short-yardage and screen passes can be used instead of a run to chip away at the first down. They're also good plays if the defense is consistently putting pressure on your QB. Overaggressive defenders can be burned badly by screen passes.

SLANTS

Crossing routes send receivers farther down the field, but they're good for quick passes underneath the defense. Passes thrown to a receiver on a slant route are more likely to be knocked down at the line, so lob the pass rather than firing the ball.

SIDELINES

Sideline routes send receivers toward the outside of the field, allowing them to catch the ball and quickly step out of bounds if you need to stop the clock.

TIMING

Timing routes are the toughest routes to master. Posts, curls, and outs have predetermined movements along the receiver's route. Practice mode is useful for getting the timing down on these types of plays. Wait for the receiver to make his cut that separates him from the defender, then drill him between the numbers.

Receivers make a quick move inside when running a post pattern.

Curl routes have receivers making a quick move back toward the QB.

Out patterns require receivers to make a quick move to the outside at a certain point along the route.

DEEP

Having a deep threat can keep the defense honest, but throwing deep on every play is seldom successful. Hail Marys and deep fly patterns can get you good chunks of yardage if the defense has put everyone on the line and your offensive line gives you enough time to wait for your receivers to get down the field. If you want to base your offense around going deep often, you'll need excellent offensive linemen, excellent receivers, an excellent QB, and a good deal of luck. Of course, if you're on the 50-yard line, down by a TD in the fourth quarter with only 10 seconds to go, your choices are limited. In that situation, chuck and duck away.

READING DEFENSES

Reading defenses is a must-learn skill for total domination of your opponents. Being able to tell where they'll attack lets you plan to be somewhere else. It's much easier to react to the defense if you've got a good idea of what they're up to. Following are some tips for reading defenses.

Linebackers creeping up on the line usually indicates some kind of blitz. Be prepared to get rid of the ball quickly if passing. If the defense is crowding the line at the point where your running play is headed, be prepared to find a secondary opening.

Pay attention to where the safeties are headed. Sometimes they'll run over to provide double-coverage on your receivers, or they'll float in the middle to cover receivers who are running crossing routes. Anticipate where the safeties will go and throw away from the double-coverage.

Watch out for blitzing cornerbacks coming out of nowhere from the sides of the screen.

Know where the weaker defensive players are and exploit that side of the field. Avoid throwing or running straight at superstar players—they'll be more likely to intercept your pass or crush you for a devastating loss.

DEFENSE FORMATIONS

There are five defensive formations and a Special Teams formation that lets you pick various punting and kicking coverages. Different defensive formations allow different defensive coverages that you can call depending on the situation. For strategies detailing when to call plays out of specific formations, see the "Defensive Strategies" section.

4-3. Four down linemen, three linebackers, four defensive backs.

3-4. Three down linemen, four linebackers, four defensive backs.

Nickel. Four down linemen, two linebackers, five defensive backs.

Dime. Four down linemen, one linebacker, six defensive backs.

Goal Line. Four down linemen, four linebackers, three defensive backs bunched along the line of scrimmage.

DEFENSIVE STRATEGIES

A good offense is showy, but without a good defense your games will turn into shootouts where whoever has possession last, wins. A good offense will win you a few games, but defense wins championships.

One of the keys to running a successful defense is knowing which formation and which kind of defensive play to call in a given situation. Following are explanations of when to use specific formations and types of plays.

4-3 AND 3-4

The 4-3 and the 3-4 are typical base formations. Whether your base is a 4-3 or 3-4 is largely a matter of your team's personnel. Teams with stronger down linemen than linebackers run a 4-3; teams with stronger linebackers than defensive linemen run a 3-4.

NICKEL

A Nickel formation is used in obvious passing situations (such as fourth and long). Using a Nickel package adds speed to your overall defense, but can leave holes in your run defense.

DIME

Dime coverages are only used when passing is your opponent's only option, such as fourth and long or when they need lots of points in a hurry. With a Dime formation, you also have the option of running some aggressive safety/cornerback blitzes because there are extra defensive backs in the formation to take up the slack.

GOAL LINE

Use this formation in short yardage situations only (5 yards or less), and as the name suggests, only near the goal line. You can put a serious damper on an opponent's running game with this formation, but you're one good pass play away from giving up a TD.

GENERAL TIPS

Try to emulate the playing style your NFL team uses during the season. If your team is not a defensive powerhouse, don't call many blitzes. Play it safe, but remember that the only thing a prevent defense is good for is preventing you from winning. Hit first, hit fast, and hit hard. Other general tips:

- Diving works better than trying to power tackle.
- When a pass has been thrown, select the closest defender and jump to knock the ball away or intercept the pass.
- Hit a receiver hard enough as he catches the ball and you may knock it loose (just don't get there too early).
- Don't hit the QB after he throws or hands off.
- Use the swim move to get past the offensive line and pressure the QB.
- Study your opponent's tendencies and call coverages that best combat their offensive preferences.
- Taking an angle at a break-away offensive player is better than diving for a shoelace tackle.
- Make sure any player who's gone in motion is covered.
- Don't run into the punter.
- Shift the defensive line to put people outside the guards to get a better angle on the pass rush.
- Use bump-and-run to disrupt the offense's passing routes.

TYPES OF COVERAGES

In each formation, you have the option of three types of defensive plays: man-to-man, zone, or blitz.

MAN-TO-MAN

These plays put one defender on each offensive player. If your overall defensive personnel are significantly better than your opponent's, you can get away with calling man coverages often. Man-to-man play won't net you any big losses, but won't give up any big gains either.

ZONE

Zone plays assign defenders a certain area to protect. These are designed to make certain receivers look open, when in fact they are covered. Zones are often your best bet for creating interception opportunities, but a blown coverage or play call can leave a receiver wide open.

BLITZES

Blitzes force the offense to react to the defense quickly. These plays send more defenders toward the QB than there are blockers to defend him. The opposing QB must get rid of the ball quickly or be forced to take a loss. Blitzes are good for disrupting the flow of the offense's game plan and can net big losses. The downside is that with extra defenders rushing the QB, it's guaranteed that a receiver is open somewhere. Blitzes are combined with either zone or man-to-man coverages to make up for the blitzing player(s).

SCOUTING AN OPPOSING OFFENSE

Another key to successfully defending is knowing your opponent's superstars and weaknesses. Look at the opposing offensive line to see which side to blitz from. Note your opponent's offensive tendencies and call coverages that best combat their style of play. For example, if your opponent bases its offense around a running back, shut him down and force them to beat you with their passing game.

OTHER COACHING TIPS

AUDIBLES

If a play doesn't look as good on the field as it did when you called it, you can call another predetermined audible play. Madden 2000 allows you to set up three offensive and three defensive audible plays. For offense, pick a short pass play, long pass play, and a run play. On defense, set up audibles that allow you to choose a range of defensive coverages that can handle obvious run or pass plays. For the maximum chance of success, choose plays you know very well and are most comfortable running.

CLOCK MANAGEMENT

When time is running out, use these tips to help your hurry-up offense:

- First rule of clock management: Pay attention to the game clock. In the heat of battle, you can forget how much time is left.
- Throw to the sidelines so you can quickly step out of bounds to stop the clock.
- If you're going to run, pick sweeps or tosses to keep the ball from the middle of the field.
- Use the stop clock play to down the ball and stop the clock.
- When you're winning, use the kneel down play to run out the clock.

TWO-POINT CONVERSION

Introduced to pro football in 1995, the two-point conversion makes extra point attempts a little more interesting. In most situations, kicking the extra point will suffice. However, there are certain times when a two-point conversion is the smart play.

WHEN LEADING BY	GO FOR	WHEN TRAILING BY	GO FOR
1	2	1	★
2	1	2	2
3	1	3	1
4	2	4	★
5	2	5	2

★ Coach's decision (could go either way)

To set yourself up for a successful two-point try, pick your most reliable short yardage play. Because you've only got a short area to work with, keep your plays quick and simple.

If you're trying to deny an opponent's attempt at a two-point conversion, line up in a goal line formation and defend as you would for any other short yardage situation.

THE PLAY EDITOR

Madden NFL 2000 allows you to create three offensive and three defensive plays for your custom playbook. If your team's playbook is lacking a type of play you'd like to run, or you think you can improve a play from your own playbook (or a play you've seen your opponents run), this is the place to do it.

GENERAL TIPS

Colored lines show what each player is slated to do.

When creating plays, use the blimp cam. You'll have a much better view of the field and the players' positions. You'll also be able to see where blocking is ineffective and where coverages are blown.

Run plays from both the blimp cam and the normal view. The blimp cam lets you see what's happening across the field, and normal view allows you to see if the play is feasible in gameplay situations.

OFFENSE—RUN

NOTE Once you've assigned the running back or fullback, you can no longer control the quarterback.

Running plays come in two general varieties. The running back either runs through the offensive line or heads to the outside. A different type of blocking scheme is necessary depending on which type of run you want to create.

BLOCKING SCHEMES

There are three different types of run blocks for offensive linemen (pulls, blocking to a side, and blocking straight ahead). Tight ends are included in the offensive line.

You can assign your running back or fullback to lead block, block to a side, or block outside.

Receivers can be assigned to crackback or run block.

RUNNING OUTSIDE

For running outside, create blocking assignments that pick up the defensive backs and outside linebackers.

Pull the guards, tackles, and the center to the side you're running. For example, if you want to sweep to the left, assign your left guard, left tackle, and the center to pull left.

If you want to run to the outside of a receiver, assign him to block straight ahead. But, if you want to run between the receiver and the offensive line, assign the receiver to crackback.

RUNNING INSIDE

If you want to run up the gut, you must create a hole for the running back to hit.

To create the hole for your running back, assign one offensive linemen to block left and one to block right at the point you want your running back to hit.

To provide extra blocking downfield, send a running back through the hole first to lead block.

OFFENSE—PASS

These same options are discussed in the "Passing Game Strategies" section. (You can run short yardage/screen plays, slants, sideline tosses, timing routes, and deep throws.)

NOTE When creating settings for your QB keep in mind that you won't necessarily need to adjust drops, play action, and rollouts if you're going to be controlling the QB. However, if you're calling plays as the coach and the CPU is controlling the QB, set what you want the QB to do

Set drops depending on how far down the field you're setting the play to go. Set short or no drop for quick passes, and set longer drops for plays going farther down the field.

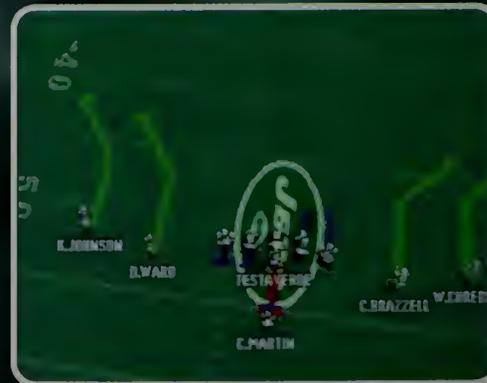

Set your QB to roll out to freeze the linebackers and give your receivers man-to-man coverage.

If you set up your QB to roll out, assign your offensive linemen (on the side he is set to run) to run block.

CAUTION

Having your QB roll out can expose him to sacks and potential injury. Don't forget the throw away and QB slide options.

Faking the handoff (play action) can bring the linebackers to the line of scrimmage, forcing man-to-man coverage.

BLOCKING SCHEMES

Pass blocking is much simpler than setting up blocking assignments for runs. Your offensive line sets up to pass block, and you can choose whether you want your running back(s) to stay behind the line and block or go out for a pass.

DEFENSE

Creating defensive plays isn't the easiest aspect of the Madden NFL 2000 play editor. It's extremely difficult to create more effective defensive schemes than can be found in most teams' playbooks. For more information on which formations and defensive plays are best for certain situations, see the "Defensive Strategies" section.

Use the blimp cam to make it easier to see what each defender is assigned to do.

Run your defensive play several times against different offensive plays to judge its effectiveness.

When creating defensive plays designed to derail your opponent's passing game, your goal is to maximize coverage of the field while giving the QB as little time to get rid of the ball as possible.

Creating effective defensive plays against the run involves plugging all the right holes.

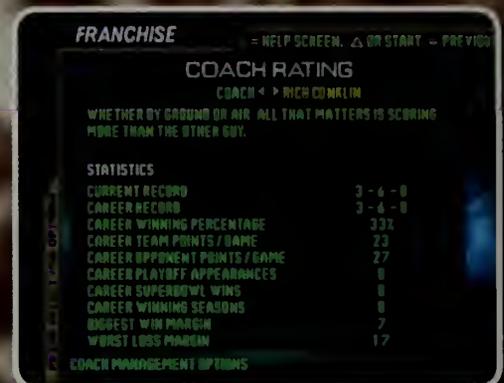

FRANCHISE MANAGEMENT

Franchise mode lets you take control of a team and build your franchise into a Super Bowl contender (many of the same options are available in Season mode, but only for one season). Real-life events and restrictions apply, such as the draft, free agency, salary cap, injuries, and retirees.

THE BEGINNINGS OF A DYNASTY

The first step in managing a successful franchise is to select a team. Take a close look at the prospective team's roster, taking into account the age of your players, their attributes, overall ratings, and what your team might need for the future.

As you take your team through the first year, you have complete control of the team, acting as coach and the front office. You can sign, trade, or put players on the waiver wire. You can either let your team progress through the season on their own, or take control yourself.

Watch your coach rating; you can get fired for poor performance.

TIP In Franchise and Season modes, the Injury Report is a good way to prepare for an upcoming game. Check the IR list to see who's out and for how long, then exploit that hole in their roster.

AFTER THE SEASON

During the off-season you have various options for evaluating and tweaking your team. You'll have the opportunity to evaluate your current roster, resign or release players, consider trades, work the draft, and sign free agents.

PLAYER PROGRESSION

END OF SEASON		PLAYER PROGRESSION
TEAM	RAIDERS	POSITION	ALL
	D. RUSSELL		OVR	STR	AGI
	LAST YEAR		91	91	67
	+ / -		5	3	3
	POS		OVR	STR	AGI
76	WISNIEWSKI	LG	100	93	50
5	PLAUSTED	K	97	34	30
76	D. RUSSELL	DT	94	94	70
21	E. ALLEN	RCB	94	49	87
7	L. ARABUZ	P	92	39	66
24	C. WOODSON	LEB	92	56	99

Each year, player ratings can improve or decline. Evaluate your roster to see where positions have changed. Use this information to shape your draft and free agent strategy. You'll also have a good idea of who is worth trading and who you'd like to keep.

Rookies from the draft and players in their first few years need extensive playing time to reach their full potential and develop into NFL stars. The progression of all players is based upon their statistical performance in each season and their years of pro experience.

When a player starts declining, he will generally continue on his downward spiral. So, when you start seeing diminishing returns from your aging players, consider trading or releasing them if a comparable player is available.

Keep an eye on not only the overall rating of players, but their individual attributes, too. For example, it doesn't help you if a receiver is progressing as a tackler. A player with a higher overall rating may hold out for more money; make sure you check out all their stats before spending money on them.

Retired players are blessings in disguise because they free up room under the salary cap. Cap room is a valuable aspect in franchise play. You might miss an experienced player, but you'll be able to spend more money on acquiring a quality replacement.

MADDEN NFL 2000

Not all players need to be re-signed at the end of the year. A good way to manage your franchise efficiently is to sign valuable players, like hot rookies, to long-term contracts. It could be more beneficial to give a player more money and retain him for seven years than to offer him less money for a shorter time. Signing veteran players to shorter contracts could be wise; they generally retire in their late thirties, and their ratings decline as they age.

TIP It doesn't hurt to sign players for long-term contracts if they'll accept less money. If they don't pan out, you can always cut 'em.

Releasing players can benefit a coach when trying to get a little more room under the salary cap. Try to release players in positions that have many players; it makes no sense to keep a highly paid back-up who never plays. Try to find cheaper alternatives to fill the holes in your roster.

MADDEN NFL 2000

An excellent way to improve your team is to trade for players or draft picks that can fill your team's needs and make an impact. Don't be afraid to trade away aging stars to develop your team for the future. A player who has one good year left might not be as vital as a young rookie with great potential.

Always examine the proposed trades on the table. A proposed trade can often benefit your team. Other teams make offers in response to what your team needs or to what your team has in surplus.

One way to rebuild your team is to make numerous trades for draft picks. Rebuilding through the draft can make your team more powerful.

NOTE Proposing trades yourself takes quite a bit of time and research to do well. Look over other teams' rosters for any players or draft picks you may want. Trading is a skill that takes time to learn, so don't jump into proposing trades until you understand the system well, or you may end up making questionable deals that hurt your team.

NFL DRAFT

Before the draft takes place, look at the players available. A good coach needs to evaluate which rookies have the potential to be star players for years to come. Rookies have the potential to increase their overall rating after just a few years. A coach has many different options in the draft. You can draft the best player available or concentrate on what your team needs right now. One of the most important keys to having a dominant team is drafting and grooming a young quarterback. Every dynasty needs a great leader to build around.

DRAFT PICK SIGNING

Keeping your new draft picks around for many years is essential to reaping their benefits in the future. Base their salaries on their potential, and don't be afraid to commit to long-term contracts. They'll be reluctant to sign on for the long-term unless you up the ante on their salary.

TIP A strong offensive line is the foundation for a successful franchise. Through the draft or free agency, be sure your offensive line is always top-notch and you have good back-ups in case of first-string injuries.

FREE AGENT SIGNING

Free agent signing could very well be the most crucial aspect of any franchise's front office decisions. Bringing in top free agents can make an immediate impact on your team's performance. Big name free agents cost a lot of money, so keep in mind salary cap limitations and how signing those free agents will affect your team's long-term performance. Sometimes signing two lesser-quality players for the same amount of money rather than forking out big money for one player is a good idea.

REORDER ROSTER

Reorder the roster before the beginning of each new season. This ensures that the player with the highest overall rating in each position starts each game. However, your rookie players need to see some action, so throughout the season, find some junk time to get them in the game so their overall ratings have a chance to improve.

The reigning Super Bowl–champion Denver Broncos will attempt a three-peat this season, but they'll have to do it without future Hall-of-Fame quarterback John Elway. They've still got an excellent running back, Terrell Davis, and a strong batch of receivers, including Ed McCaffrey, Rod Smith, and tight end Shannon Sharpe. Bill Romanowski, John Mobley, and Dale Carter star on a formidable defensive squad.

broncos

The Dog Pound is bound to be full again, as the Browns return to Cleveland after a three-year hiatus. But, they're back as an expansion team, so they've got plenty of building to do. Veteran players such as Chris Spielman, Roy Barker, and Marquez Pope provide experience on defense. 1990 Heisman-trophy winning quarterback Ty Detmer, running back Terry Kirby, and fullback Marc Edwards lead the offense.

chargers

Kansas City's version of the West Coast-style offense is anchored by an excellent offensive line, including guard Dave Szott. Linebacker Derrick Thomas (the all-time leader for most sacks in a game) leads a tough defense that also includes defensive tackle Chester McGlockton and cornerback James Hasty.

chiefts

Indianapolis picked up Peyton Manning as their No. 1 draft pick in 1998 and big things are expected from the young quarterback. Fresh running back Edgerrin James is sure to add excitement to the young offense. The Colts have added linebacker Cornelius Bennett and Chad Bratzke to shore up their defense.

colts

Dallas remains a contender in the Super Bowl hunt, with quarterback Troy Aikman, receiver Michael Irvin, and running back Emmitt Smith leading a strong offense. Cornerback Deion Sanders effectively closes off his side of the field, while strong safety Darren Woodson doesn't let any open spot stay that way for long.

COWBOYS

Miami still has future Hall-of-Fame quarterback Dan Marino to lead a good offense that features receivers Tony Martin and O.J. McDuffie. The Dolphins have great speed on defense with linebacker Zach Thomas, defensive tackle Tim Bowens, and cornerbacks Sam Madison, Brock Marion, and Terrell Buckley.

San Francisco has gotten used to being at the top of the NFC. With arguably the second-best receiver core in the league (behind Minnesota), Terrell Owens, J.J. Stokes, and Jerry Rice give All-Pro quarterback Steve Young plenty of reliable targets. The Niner's defense features defensive tackle Bryant Young, free safety Merton Hanks, and linebacker Lee Woodall.

49ers

New York is currently rebuilding their offense, but they've got a great defense. Great cornerback Jason Sehorn returns from being injured all last season. Defensive end Michael Strahan, linebackers Jessie Armstead and Phillippi Sparks bring speed and power to the Giant's defensive game.

diants

Offensive linemen Tony Boselli and Leon Searcy give QB Mark Brunell a chance to lead a very balanced Jacksonville offense, with running back Fred Taylor and receivers Jimmy Smith and Keenan McCardell all potent options. Defensively, linebackers Bryce Paup and Kevin Hardy can put a lot of pressure on opposing quarterbacks.

jaaguars

The New York Jets are primed to be AFC Champion contenders this year. The Jets have a number of offensive weapons, including receivers Keyshawn Johnson and Wayne Chrebet and running back Curtis Martin. On the defensive side of the ball, linebackers Mo Lewis, Roman Phifer, and Bryan Cox, and safety Steve Atwater can really disrupt an opposing offense's gameplan. An added bonus, Dave Meggett, is a dangerous kick return threat.

Barry Sanders, one of the greatest running backs to play the game, is the foundation for Detroit's offense, which also boasts a respectable receiver core made up of Herman Moore and Johnnie Morton. Defensive end Robert Porcher and tackle Luther Ellis contribute to a solid defense.

Green Bay's QB Brett Favre plays the game like a linebacker and is at his best when he's scrambling out of the pocket. Favre has a lot of options to choose from among his receivers, including Antonio Freeman, Robert Brooks, and tight end Mark Chmura. On defense, Reggie White may have retired, but defensive linemen Gilbert Brown, Santana Dotson, and safety Leroy Butler still pack a lot of punch.

When Carolina first came into the league four years ago, they built a veteran team that was an immediate contender in the NFC Championship race. Now, the Panthers are rebuilding with that same philosophy, adding offensive tackle Nate Newton and defensive lineman Sean Gilbert, and re-signing linebacker Kevin Greene.

patriots

Oakland has one of the most talented group of individuals in the league. New quarterback Rich Gannon has receivers Tim Brown, James Jett, and tight end Ricky Dudley to wing the ball to and running back Napoleon Kaufmann in the backfield. The Raiders have an excellent defense, with defensive linemen Darrell Russell and Russell Maryland and cornerbacks Charles Woodson (a 1997 Heisman-trophy winner), Eric Allen, and Eric Turner bringing the silver-and-black attack.

rams

When the Browns left Cleveland and their name three years, the Ravens were born in Baltimore. Offensive lineman Jonathan Ogden is the Raven's bright spot on offense. Defensive lineman Mike McCrary, linebackers Peter Boulware and Ray Lewis, and legendary safety Rod Woodson contribute to a solid defensive squad.

ravens

Recovering from a rough start, Washington went on a hot streak at the end of last season. The offense looks to improve with the addition of quarterback Brad Johnson. Cornerback Darryl Green and defensive tackles Dana Stubblefield and Dan Wilkinson are the Redskin's defensive standouts.

redskins

New Orleans' defense seems to be on its way back to the glory days of the Dome Patrol. Defensive linemen Wayne Martin, La-roi Glover, and Joe Johnson and the linebacker skills of Mark Fields make this a defense to be reckoned with. The signing of No. 1 draft pick Ricky Williams to the running back position should liven up the Saint's offense considerably.

Receiver Joey Galloway is the go-to guy of Seattle's offense. Running back Ricky Watters has both rushing and receiving skills. Defensively, the Seahawks have some formidable players, including linebacker Chad Brown, cornerback Shawn Springs, and defensive linemen Cortez Kennedy, Michael Sinclair, and Sam Adams.

seahawks

Pittsburgh has consistently produced strong defensive teams, even with a rotating roster due to free agency losses. Linebackers Levon Kirkland, Jason Gildon, and Earl Holmes wreak havoc on opposing offenses. On offense, The "Bus," Jerome Bettis, following the blocks of center Dermontti Dawson and fullback Jon Witman, rolls over defenses.

SPECIAL GOAL LINE

stealers

With a new name, Tennessee hopes to make the playoffs they just missed last year. Running back Eddie George supplies the power to the rushing game, while Yancey Thigpen provides reliable receiving. Safeties Blaine Bishop and Marcus Robertson put the lock down on the deep threat and linebackers Eddie Robinson and Joe Bowden round out the defensive standouts.

titanians

Having the best record in the NFL last season, Minnesota should once again be on top of the heap. The Vikings have arguably the best receiver core in football with Cris Carter, Randy Moss, and Jake Reed. With their great offensive line, quarterback Randall Cunningham should have no trouble finding an open, reliable receiver. Defensively, tackle John Randall is never far from the ball.

PLAYER RATINGS

These are the player ratings for all 31 1999-2000 season teams and free agents. Each team roster is sorted by position and overall rating. This way you can look over your team to see who you might want to trade, release, or re-sign. Look over other teams' rosters and the free agent list if you're looking to trade or sign a player to fill positions.

NOTE A max of 200 points is available if you answer all 200 questions regardless of the difficulty setting.

The Madden Challenge comprises 200 trivia questions and 100 pre-determined tasks that you have the opportunity to complete while playing Madden NFL 2000. Points are awarded for correctly answering a trivia question or completing one of the tasks. As you achieve various point totals, secret codes and teams are awarded.

You earn one Madden Challenge point for answering each trivia question correctly. The number of points awarded for completing a Madden Challenge task varies depending on the task's difficulty level and the game's difficulty setting. There are five task difficulty levels ("1" being the easiest, "5" the hardest) and four game difficulty settings (Rookie, Pro, All Pro, and All Madden).

Here's a breakdown of the point totals awarded for completing the Madden Challenge tasks at the various difficulty levels.

NOTE You can't complete the same task multiple times on the same difficulty level for more points. You can, however, complete the same task on a higher difficulty level to gain the maximum points for the task at that level. For example, if you complete a level 1 challenge on Rookie mode for 1 point, then complete that same level 1 challenge on All Pro mode for 6 points, you'll be awarded 5 points.

NOTE You can complete different tasks of the same level on various difficulty levels. For example, you can complete 10 level 1 tasks on Rookie mode for 10 points, then complete the other 10 level 1 tasks on All Madden mode for 60 points, giving you a grand total of 70 points.
