

Dubbelmoral!

This is a Swedish game which is based on the “Lundakarnevalen” a carnival in the city Lund in southern Sweden.

The scenes or levels in the game are based on actual locations in Lund on and around the university.

Fontänen - the fountain in front of the University of Lund.

Akademiska föreningen - The Academic Society, the red circle on the picture points out the balcony where the player figure is standing in the left picture. <http://af.lu.se/?lang=en>

Domkyrkan - The Cathedral, “Beträd ej gräset” means “Don’t walk on the grass”.

“Nilen” (The Nile, as in the river) was a 15 metre long urinal, purpose-built for the carnival’s male visitors. “Urinoar” means “Urinal”.

Quotes in the game:

- The mother when you are sitting at your desk studying “Duktig pojke” - “Good boy”.
- The mother when you are not studying but at the carnival “Gå hem och läs” - “Go home and study”.
- The man in black and white stripes clothes on the balcony “Vem fan är du?” - “Who the hell are you?”.
- The man sitting at the table in front of the Academic Society throwing beers when you try to get up on the balcony “Du detta jävul” - “You this devil” but more correctly in english would likely be “Your little devil”.

Translation:

- Dubbelmoral - double standards.
- Fylla, nödighet and Skada - as my good old friend Anders put it “Nödighet” is how badly you need to go. Is there a word for it? “Bladder emergency level”? Fylla is intoxication, skada can mean injury or more correctly “health” in the context of the game.“
- Poäng - Score.
